Our NEXT NEW MEMBER is Just an INVITE Away!

Two words you hear a lot today are innovation and flexibility when we think about any organization adapting to a rapidly changing environment. But what do they mean for Rotary? Someone you might recognize: a young professional in a new town or a new business, looking for friendship, looking for connections with other professionals, looking to make an impact, but unsure where to begin. Well, that man was Paul Harris, Rotary's founder. In 1905 he was only 36 years old. What started as a fellowship of four people grew into a large and thriving service organization.

So, were you under 40 when you joined Rotary? The myth that Rotary cannot be the place for young people to make their mark on the world is just that — a myth. But if we are serious about growing Rotary and attracting new members from all demographics, we must innovate. It begins with developing a culture of positive change and adapting to the needs of our new realities and challenges.

So, when you meet a new young professional in town, the first question to them should be "are you interested in networking with other business professionals?" Invite them to a Rotary meeting, arrive early and before you sit down for the meal, take them around the room introducing them AND NAME their business! After the meeting, explain to them a bit about our service projects and impact on the community learning telling them about the Club.
